(She plays and he sings, making the same mistake as at first. She crashes discordantly upon the piano.) Oh, Tom! Cant you do better than that Tom. I presume I could, if youd give me a chance. Ive got to learn the thing. Im no Jean DeReszke. Sal. Thats perfectly evident. I dont believe youll ever make your fortune singing. (The door bell rings off L. u. E.) Tom. I dont want to. Id rather say those words than sing them, anyway. Sal. (with her Jinger on the music). Those words Tom. Yes, these words. (lfe recites a few passionate words from the song, in a fervent tone, just as Robert Chalmers enters L. u. E.) Chalmers. A-a-hem! Sal. Oh! why, Uncle Robert, is that you We-we were just practicing a song. Tom. Y-yes; a...
