The sun, like a golden lamp, is hung out in the etheial vault, and pours his eiiulgent lays all the day9 to enlighten our paths. When night approaches, the moon take up the friendly ofhce; and the stars appear, in twiukling myriads, to cheer the darknes with their milder lustre. The clouds, besides the rich painting they hang around the heavens, act the part of a shifting screen, and defend us by their seasonable mterposition, from...
