The Imitation of Buddha: Quotations from Buddhist Literature for Each Day in the Year (Paperback)

By Ernest M Bowden

Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .IT has been remarked by Professor Jowett, in a well-known essay, that human nature lives on in the hope of becoming better, and that Ideals even though unrealized have effect on our daily life. Hence it is that in trying to attain higher levels of principle and of conduct, people cling to religious teachers and to philosophers, who, just as poets have an especially keen insight into nature and the emotions of mankind, can see, and make others see, with singular clearness into moral relations and the harmony of life. We are conscious of growing into the likeness of what we imitate, and of being insensibly carried forward by that which we admire. A distinct ethical ideal will therefore develop into a distinct ethical aim. In forming that ideal, we are helped by the example, the thoughts, the experience, and the injunctions of ancient and modern sages, and at no former time has there been greater willingness than now to recognize the claims to this kind of leadership of those who, at different times and...
