I dreamed, or I actually saw, a huge figure opposite me in the library. What was it? Is it gone? Yes, quite gone, the clergyman said, I think the little child has driven it away. A little child! Sir Christopher said. What little child? Your sister Margaret s little Meg, was the reply. Your dead sister s legacy to you--Meg and Nelly. 1 Tell--tell Hastie to take care of them. And then Sir Christopher fell into a quiet, natural sleep. CHAPTER V. ANOTHER CHRISTMAS. NOTHER Christmas came, quickly, as Christmas always seems to come, especially to us who are far on in the journey heavenward. Christmas bells ring out, and then before their echo has died away the blessed season comes round again; and we see many changes, and our hearts ache for the vacant places by our hearth--for the lost sheep from the fold--for all the changes and chances of this mortal life. But Unto us a Child is born: unto us a Son is given; and we know that He, the Lord God Omnipotent, reigneth, and that His message to us--His royal message--is goodwill and peace. So our hearts are braced and strengthened, and we can go on cheerfully and joyfully, and sing with all our strength the glad Christmas song of Glory to the new-born King! What a Christmas Eve this was in Sir Christopher s house! Where were his crotchets now? Blown away like a puff of wind, Mrs....
