

The Rivalry: Indiana and Purdue and the History of Their Old Oaken Bucket Battles 1925 - 2002

By Robert D. Arnold

AuthorHouse. Paperback. Book Condition: New. Paperback. 452 pages. Dimensions: 9.0in. x 6.0in. x 1.0in. Over a century of competition has succeeded in transforming college football from the 19th century flying wedge to today's multitude of offensive and defensive formations. What was once a contest of power has become a game of speed, deception and remarkable feats of athletic ability. But some traditions have remained inviolate through the years. For over 100 autumn Saturdays the Boilermakers of Purdue University and the Hoosiers of Indiana have played each other, usually at season end, in a game to establish annual bragging rights for the state of Indiana. In 1925, the two schools decided such a prestigious event should have some symbol of yearly dominance. An Old Oaken Bucket was chosen and, for the next 78 years, this century old bucket became the centerpiece of one of college football's greatest rivalries. Every fall, late in November, these two teams played for possession of the Bucket, no holds barred, through cold, ice, rain, mud and all other meteorological events indigenous to Indiana in late November. Fights were commonplace and feelings ran deep particularly among the respective students who had proceeded to make Bucket Week, a period of celebration and skulduggery. Few of the battles were of the magnitude to warrant national...
