ASA Publishing Company, United States, 2011. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 216 x 140 mm. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Reuben Watson lived a quiet life for an ex-paratrooper. He had migrated from England to far North Queensland, Australia. He stared into thousands of acres of scrub jungle, as he stood in his back garden performing call of nature at 11 pm one evening. Without warning, Reuben had one of his calf muscles badly slashed. Mary, his wife, drove him to the nearest hospital. Reuben couldn't tell the treating doctor how it happened. Doctor Sluff, a psychiatrist, was brought in. Under hypnosis, Reuben described the little people with swords. Sluff had Reuben committed to an out of the way psychiatric hospital while the Constabulary came off second best as they searched the rainforest at night time for unknown assailants. Due to this, the C.M.F. or known other places as the Home Guard were requested to assist the Constabulary in their quest for closure into the death and wounding of two of their young officers. It was probably fortunate for the little people that the C.M.F. personnel were mostly boys who had just elevated their prowess to include shaving, and their searching included boredom; this meant that they missed things. Reuben, with the help of another former soldier under his command, escaped the psyche ward. Sluff, with a pulped nose, wanted Reuben and Earnie to pay dearly. Reuben became a wanted man. Earnie took Reuben to access the scrub jungle behind Reuben's home where all the activity seemed to be. With luck and understanding, Reuben encountered a little person, saving him first from a wild pig and then possibly the big soldiers. Reuben and his wife, Mary, communicated with Hoonig through sign language, and eventually...
